

AMERICAN AIRLINES TO OPERATE THE WORLD'S ONLY SERVICE BETWEEN NEW YORK AND TOKYO HANEDA AIRPORT

New Service Provides Long-Awaited Benefit to Travelers as Haneda is Less Than 30 Minutes from Downtown Tokyo

Up to Triple AAdvantage Miles Offered Through May 31

American Airlines will be the first U.S. airline to launch service between the continental United States and Tokyo's Haneda Airport since the United States and Japan signed a historic Open Skies Agreement in October 2010. American is the world's only airline to fly between New York and Haneda – located only 30 minutes from downtown Tokyo, a long-awaited benefit for travelers – in more than 30 years. American begins service on Friday, Feb. 18, from New York JFK, and on Sunday, Feb. 20, from Haneda.

oneworld will offer more flights between the U.S. and Haneda than any other airline alliance. In addition to its new service to Haneda, American will continue to provide service to Tokyo's Narita Airport from New York JFK, Chicago, Los Angeles and Dallas/Fort Worth. American's cornerstone markets are also some of the most traveled U.S.–Japan markets.

American and oneworld continue to strengthen their position in New York and other key U.S. cities. New York is a key city for both of American's joint businesses – across the Atlantic with British Airways and Iberia, and across the Pacific with Japan Airlines. Customers now have more travel choices to Europe and the Pacific on these partner airlines than in the past.

Japan Airlines will codeshare on American's New York–Haneda flight and also serves the New York–Tokyo market via Narita. Together, the two airlines will provide a choice of three daily round-trip flights for customers traveling between New York and Tokyo. In addition, JAL offers service to Narita from Los Angeles, Chicago and Honolulu, and to Haneda from San Francisco and Honolulu. American markets and codeshares on these Japan Airlines flights.

American offers triple AAdvantage miles for First and Business Class travel and double AAdvantage miles for Economy Class travel on the new route through May 31, 2011. To participate in this offer, register prior to travel and obtain complete details at AA.com/haneda.
