FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Woman arrested after stealing a police car

N'Shayla Clay

A Shreveport woman was arrested Sunday night after causing a disturbance and stealing a marked SPD police car.

On Sunday December 6, 2020, just before 10:00 p.m., Shreveport police responded to the intersection of Metris Street and Greenwood Road relative to a disorderly female. Officers contacted N'Shayla Clay (08-19-20) at this location. When officers attempted to detain Clay, she physically resisted and was able to enter into the passenger side of a Shreveport Police patrol car. Once inside, Clay attempted to drive away in the officer's patrol car striking both another officer and a separate marked unit.

Clay was apprehended a short distance from this location and was detained by officers following a brief struggle to remove her from the marked unit. The officer was treated for a minor injury. He transported to Ochsner LSU Health and later released.

N'Shayla Clay was charged with one count of Carjacking, one count of Aggravated battery, one count of Aggravated property damage, and one count of Aggravated Flight. She was booked into the Shreveport City Jail.
