City of Shreveport Launches Rehabilitation of Linwood Elevated Tank

The City of Shreveport Department of Water and Sewerage is pleased to announce that contractors have mobilized to begin rehabilitation work on the Linwood Elevated Tank, located off Flournoy Lucas Road near Interstate 49. This vital infrastructure project marks a significant step toward improving water service reliability for residents in the southeast areas of the city while also enhancing the Shreveport skyline.

The rehabilitation will include comprehensive interior and exterior coating upgrades and equipment modernization to ensure the tank meets current operational and safety standards. In addition, the tank's new design will feature the creative work of local artist Terri Rhodes White, whose submission won the Shreveport Regional Arts Council (SRAC) Water Tank Design Contest. This artistic addition will symbolize progress and showcase local talent in one of the city's most visible landmarks.

The Linwood Elevated Tank will be out of service for approximately 3-4 months during the rehabilitation process. The temporary removal from operation has been carefully tested, in the field and virtually, to minimize impacts to our customers. We will be constantly monitoring the progress of this project and are prepared to make adjustments as needed to ensure service reliability. If customers experience any issues, they should report them to our Dispatch team at 318-673-7600.

This project is made possible thanks to funding awarded by the Water Sector Commission. We extend our gratitude to Mayor Tom Arceau, the Shreveport City Council, and our state legislative delegation for their unwavering support in securing this critical grant. Their advocacy ensures that Shreveport's infrastructure continues to improve, benefiting our citizens and fostering community pride.

"Projects like the Linwood Elevated Tank rehabilitation are critical investments in our city's future," said Mayor Tom Arceau. "This project not only strengthens our water infrastructure but also demonstrates how partnerships between local government, the state, and community stakeholders can deliver impactful results."

The Department of Water and Sewerage remains dedicated to delivering high-quality water service to Shreveport residents. This project represents an important milestone in our ongoing efforts to modernize and enhance the city's water infrastructure.
