Shreveport Police Continue Efforts to Combat Domestic Violence

Terry Little & Lawren Hollingsworth-Clark

Domestic violence is a serious matter, and the Shreveport Police Department remains committed to reducing its impact within our community. October is recognized as Domestic Violence Awareness Month — a time to bring attention to this issue, support victims, and hold offenders accountable.

Recently, Shreveport Police arrested Terry Little, who has been charged with one count of battery of a dating partner by strangulation. Little is accused of grabbing a female by the neck and applying significant pressure, restricting her ability to breathe. Following an investigation, detectives obtained an arrest warrant, and Little was taken into custody on October 12, 2025.

On October 13, 2025, officers responded to a separate domestic violence call resulting in the arrest of Lawren Hollingsworth-Clark for domestic abuse battery in violation of a protective order. Violating a protective order is a serious offense and undermines the safety measures in place for victims of domestic violence.

Protective orders play a critical role in protecting victims and preventing further harm. If you or someone you know may be a victim of domestic violence, please speak up. Help is available.
